Background

America's rural electric cooperatives were founded in the 1930s, 40s, and 50s as a democratic solution to a community problem -- getting electricity and economic opportunity to America's farms. Democratically owned and controlled, they were the antidote to the for-profit utilities that refused to serve America's rural communities. Sadly, after decades of declining member engagement, too many co-ops are falling short in their mission -- or have been caught outright stealing money from their member-owners. The need for reform is urgent and real. The time is now.

We Own It is a new, independent, national member-owner organizing and education nonprofit. We're committed to helping member-owners protect their rights and make sure that co-ops are focused on serving member interests. We help inspire, educate, and empower member-owner campaigns across the US.
